Update on 2020 “Wednesday Night Live” performances

Thanks to all of you who have inquired about Wednesday Night Live over the past several months.

As you know, we determined that Wednesday Night Live was not feasible for May or June based on recommended COVID-19 restrictions, precautions, and limitations. Today, after nearly two months of internal discussions and debates, we make the very difficult decision to also cancel all July performances with the hope that we will be able to return in August and through the month of September leading up to Harvest Fair.

At the center of the decision is health and safety. Those will always be our number one goals at the Bud Pavilion. After looking at every possible way we could confidently open our doors to the public, we determined that it cannot be properly accomplished at this time.

Please stay connected to us through our website, Facebook, and Instagram pages for further updates. Thank you for your patience, understanding, and trust.
